

I chose to record information about who I greeted during a week, because I was curious about how I tend to spend time with other people. The variables I collected include day, location, context where I knew them from, whether I expected to see them, and the length of the conversation.

